Man arrested in fight at elementary school

FROM NEW ERA STAFF REPORTS

A Hunter Owen Court man was arrested Thursday morning when he allegedly punched another man in at South Christian Elementary, according to a Christian County Sheriff's Department report.

Darius D. Phillips, 23, was at the elementary school when a man bumped into him. Phillips said something to the man, who then smiled back at Phillips, deputies said. Phillips hit the man, and the two started fighting, according to the report.

They ran into a teacher who was walking with 20 kindergarten students, deputies said.

Several parents and teachers pulled the two apart. Several witnesses were present and a school camera recorded the incident. Phillips was charged with second-degree assault, first-degree wanton endangerment and second-degree disorderly conduct.

The other man was taken to the hospital for a possible broken jaw.

Feds require schools to alter meal programs

Professor, CCPS official, expert all say new rules could cause problems

BY DENNIS O'NEIL
NEW ERA STAFF WRITER

Local students will see changes in their lunch and breakfast trays this fall following the approval of new meal standards by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The new standards apply to all schools participating in the National School Lunch and School Breakfast programs. Every public school in Christian County participates in the programs. The new standards require schools to serve fruit and vegetables to students daily, increase the amount whole grain-rich foods and limit calories based on students' age.

The new standards also require schools to serve only low-fat or fat-free milk and regulate the sodium, saturated fat and trans fat content in meals. The requirements are part of the Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act, signed into law by President Barack Obama in December 2010, and will be implemented over the next three years.

QuickInfo: New requirements

The U.S. Department of Agriculture approved new meal standards in January for the National School Lunch Program and School Breakfast Program. On average, more than 7,000 Christian County students use the lunch program each day while almost 4,000 students use the breakfast program. Under the new standards, schools must:

- Make fresh fruit and vegetables available to students at both breakfast and lunch.
- Increase students' fruit and vegetable intake.
- Serve only fat-free or 1 percent low-fat milk.
- Make at least half of grains served whole grain-rich.
- Regulate sodium, fat and trans fat content in foods.
- Serve within specific calorie levels according to a student's grade level.

According to USDA, the new meal standards will affect nearly 32 million students.

Local costs

Sandra McIntosh, food services director for Christian County Public Schools, says the new standards will cost about $1 million per year.

Veterans center draws down homeless rate

BY NICK TABOR
NEW ERA STAFF WRITER

Seven weeks into its operation, the Pennyroyal Veterans Center has expanded its population from five to 24, which is roughly half its capacity.

It also has a waiting list with 25 to 30 names, said the facility's director, Howard Dixon. The men on this list are at various stages in their approval paperwork from the Veterans Administration and public housing authorities.

Dixon expects to fill the remaining beds by mid-June.

By these numbers, the facility stands poised to make a major reduction in this region's homeless population.

Homelessness rates in Christian County have risen and fallen in recent years: from 25 in 2008 up to 77 in 2010. A study from last year showed it at 49. The Kentucky Housing Corporation made its last count on Jan. 25 but has not yet released the results.

The Salvation Army on West Seventh Street has 14 bunks for men and eight bunks it can either use for women or give to families. It often fills to capacity during cold weather and has an empty bed or two in the summer, a shelter employee said.

But occupants rarely stay for longer than a few weeks, said Ursula Ellis, the organization's bookkeeper. A social worker encourages them to find a job and save money, and she decides

Baptist leader apologizes to Obama for comments

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A Southern Baptist leader has apologized to President Barack Obama and other black leaders for saying they were exploiting Trayvon Martin's death for political gain.

Richard Land said Wednesday he impugned the motives of Obama and the Revs. Jesse Jackson and Al Sharpton, all of whom have shown support and sympathy for Martin's family. Land said he sent personal letters of apology to each of the three men, asking for their forgiveness.

"God alone is the searcher of men's hearts," he wrote in an apology published by the Baptist Press. "I cannot know what motivated them and their comments in this case."

Land is president of the Southern Baptist Convention's public policy arm, the Ethics and Religious Liberty Commission. The apology is the second that Land has issued for inflammatory remarks about the case of the black Florida teenager who was shot and killed by a neighborhood watch volunteer who thought he looked suspicious.

Land initially said he had no regrets about his remarks made on March 31 during his weekly radio show. They included saying that Obama "poured gasoline on the racist fires" when he addressed Martin's slaying and that Obama, Jackson and Sharpton had used the case "to try to gin up the black vote for an African-American president who is in deep, deep, deep trouble for re-election."

Land also defended the idea that people are justified in seeing young black men as threatening, saying a black man was "statistically more likely to do you harm than a white man."

Romney counters notion he bullied gay classmates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mitt Romney apologized Thursday for "stupid" high school pranks that may have gone too far and moved quickly to stamp out any notion that he bullied schoolmates because they were gay. His swift response reflected the Republican presidential candidate's recognition that his record on gay rights is under heightened scrutiny following President Barack Obama's embrace of gay marriage.

One day after gay rights moved to the center of the presidential race with Obama's announcement on same-sex marriage, a Washington Post report about Romney's high school escapades nearly 50 years ago added a personal dimension to Democrats' claim that he's out of step on the sensitive topic.

The newspaper reported that in one case, Romney and several schoolmates held down classmate John Lauber and cut off his bleached blond hair after seeking him out in his dorm room at their boarding school in the wealthy Detroit suburb of Bloomfield Hills, Mich. The Post said Lauber was "perpetually teased for his nonconformity and presumed homosexuality" and that he screamed for help as Romney held him down. The paper recounted another incident in which Romney shouted "atta girl" to a different student at the all-boys' school who, years later, came out as gay.

"I participated in a lot of hijinks and pranks during high school and some may have gone too far. And for that I apologize," Romney told Fox News' Brian Kilmeade during a hastily arranged radio interview. Romney said he didn't remember the Lauber incident from long ago, but didn't dispute that it happened. He stressed that he didn't know either student was gay.

The Republican presidential candidate had begun the day by treading softly on Obama's historic embrace of same-sex marriage, which seems likely to fire up liberal and conservative activists alike. He quietly restated his opposition to legalizing such marriages, but his campaign turned its full attention to energy, the economy and other issues.

Then the boarding school story was posted online and Romney moved quickly to counter any suggestion he had targeted students because they were gay.

"That was the furthest thing from our minds back in the 1960s, so that was not the case," he said, adding that the students involved "didn't come out of the closet until years later."

According to the Post account, Romney was upset about how Lauber wore his bleach-blond hair hanging into his eyes.

"He can't look like that. That's wrong. Just look at him!" Romney told Matthew Friedman, a close Romney friend and one of five classmates who recalled the incident for The Post. A few days later, Romney led a group of boys out of his dorm room at Cranbrook School and into Lauber's, where the group tackled him and held him down. Romney cut his hair with scissors as a teary-eyed Lauber screamed for help.

"If there was anything I said that was offensive to someone, I certainly am sorry about that," he said.

Ceremonies mark Confederate Memorial Day in South Carolina

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Confederate Memorial Day was marked Thursday in the city where the Civil War began with a somber, reflective ceremony in which dozens of descendants of Southern troops described where their ancestors fought and many of them died.

About 100 people gathered on Charleston's Battery as a wreath was placed at a monument dedicated to the Southern defenders of Charleston. From that spot, one can look across Charleston Harbor to Fort Sumter where the April, 1861 bombardment of the Union-held fort plunged the nation into Civil War.

Those attending, many of them members of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, wore not Confederate gray but seersucker suits and straw hats under the warm May sun. About three dozen walked to the front of the gathering one at a time and then, some choking with emotion, gave the names, ranks and units of their ancestors and where they fought.

The group then sang "Dixie" and a group of Confederate re-enactors fired a cannon at nearby White Point Garden.

A holiday to honor Southerners who fell fighting for the South is officially observed in nine states of the old Confederacy, but are held at different times of the year. In the Carolinas, Confederate Memorial Day is May 10th, the day Gen. Stonewall Jackson died in 1863 after he was wounded at the Battle of Chancellorsville. In South Carolina it is an optional state holiday for state workers and the General Assembly recessed to mark the day.

Earlier Thursday, about 80 people attended a memorial service at Charleston's Huguenot Church during which they pledged allegiance to the United States, South Carolina and Confederate Flags.

"I salute the Confederate Flag with affection, reverence and undying remembrance to the cause for which it stands," the Confederate pledge says. "This is a very important day to us. We're a pure heritage group and what's what we're doing is celebrating our heritage," said Philip Middleton, the commander of the Fort Sumter Camp of the Sons of Confederate Veterans that put on the ceremony by the harbor. "We all have deep roots and we are all the descendants of Confederate soldiers."

Nat Davis, a member of the Waccamaw Light Artillery, the re-enacting unit that fired the canon, said he re-enacts to help people understand the war and how it was fought.

"We want to bring the spirit of the cannon back because cannon played such a role in the destruction of Charleston," said Davis. His ancestors fought on both sides in the war, both with Sherman and with Southern units who opposed him in South Carolina.

Florida man dies while touring Mammoth Cave

MAMMOTH CAVE, Ky. (AP) — A Florida man has died while on a cave tour at Mammoth Cave National Park in southern Kentucky.

Park spokeswoman Vickie Carson says 67-year-old William Larry Martin of Bronson, Fla., became ill in the River Hall portion of the cave, about a mile-and-a-half into the tour.

Carson told The Daily News in Bowling Green that Martin, who was touring the cave with his family, had to be carried out on a stretcher.

Edmonson County Coroner Michael Alexander pronounced Martin dead at 1:18 p.m. Cental time.

Carson said no one has died on a cave tour since the 1980s.

Plymouth Engineering Shapes signs $100 million contract

BY BENJAMIN JOUBERT
NEW ERA STAFF WRITER

Plymouth Engineering Shapes in Hopkinsville was recently awarded a contract with one of the leading aircraft manufacturers in the world.

The contract with Airbus will extend through the year 2020 and will produce gross revenues in excess of $100 million, a "significant amount," said Gary Ezell, Aerospace sales manager for Plymouth.

Plymouth makes semi-finished titanium airframe extrusions. There are only four plants in the world that make the same kind of titanium extrusions, Ezell said. Plymouth will soon be making parts for Airbus' extra-wide body aircrafts.

Signed in February, the contract has been a two-year project for Plymouth and Airbus, Ezell said.

"The Hopkinsville plant has been successful since its early days," said Plymouth's President and CEO Donald C. Van Pelt Jr. in a company news release.

Right now, the Hopkinsville plant is undergoing a $13 million capital extension project to accommodate the new contract. The expansion will also service other companies, Ezell said.

Nearly every commercial aircraft flying today has some part from the Hopkinsville Plymouth plant, Ezell said.

Plymouth opened its Hopkinsville plant in 1981.

Ky. sees drop in government revenue

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky's general government revenue dropped in April after 10 months of growth, but that doesn't mean the state's economy has staggered, the state's point person on budget matters said Thursday.

Revenue of $838 million was down nearly 1 percent, largely because of drops in collections from corporate income tax, cigarette tax and property tax.

State Budget Director Mary Lassiter said the news wasn't all bad.

"While April revenues were slightly negative overall, both the sales and individual income taxes were strong — an indication that the state economy is expanding in a manner consistent with our latest projections," Lassiter said in a statement.

Sales tax collections grew by 4.3 percent in April and individual income tax receipts rose by 2.2 percent.

The sharpest decline was in collections from the so-called coal severance tax, which fell by more than 26 percent. That's a particularly troublesome number because it equates both to lost state revenue and to lost jobs in the coalfields, said Kentucky Coal Association President Bill Bissett.

The tax on mined coal generates nearly $250 million a year for state government. Bissett said coal companies were hit by a double whammy: difficulties in getting government permits to open new mines and a mild winter that required less electricity to heat homes.

"In many ways, it is a perfect storm that's impacting our ability to mine coal and pushing down the price of that coal," Bissett said.

Many electric-generating plants were left with stockpiles of unused coal after the mild winter, which reduced demand and led to some layoffs.

Bissett said the state's 18,000 coal miners can only hope that the mild winter will be followed by a hot summer that will keep air conditioners sucking electricity.

"A lot will depend on what the summer does to us weather-wise," Bissett said.

Meanwhile, revenues coming into the state's Road Fund grew by more than 4 percent in April, driven largely by higher collections from the fuel tax and the motor vehicle usage tax.

Ky. county visits up despite bridge damage

BENTON, Ky. (AP) — A western Kentucky county is thriving, not just surviving, after a boat struck a bridge that leads tourists to the area.

Marshall County Tourism Commission director Randy Newcomb said from January through March, hotel room tax numbers have jumped by 20 percent. Newcomb told The Paducah Sun that warm weather has helped, but tourists wanting to see the part of the Eggner's Ferry Bridge that collapsed also gave the numbers a boost.

"We thought it would hurt our numbers," Newcomb said. "But there has been no dramatic downturn. In fact, there's been a lot of people here with the weather and the fishing. It's been a pleasant surprise."

The bridge is undergoing repairs after being struck by the Delta Mariner in January. The bridge, which crossed Kentucky Lake, carries about 3,000 vehicles per day between Aurora and the Land Between the Lakes National Recreation Area, which stretches from western Kentucky into Tennessee.

Direct repairs to the bridge are set to begin this weekend, and construction firm Hall Contracting faces a May 27 deadline.

"People wanted to see the bridge," Newcomb said. "And we benefited from that. There were a lot of people who were curious and ended up staying here or coming down for the day during that time period."

Tracy Hugenroth, a clerk at The Hitching Post, said the gift-shop business has experienced steady business after expecting a radical drop in sales.

"We had a small drop-off when the Quilt Show was in because some people elected to stay in Cadiz instead of come over here," Hugenroth said. "But other than that it's been business as usual. We are expecting it only to get better."

Kentucky State Resort Park manager John Rittenhouse said the park had an "extremely good March." Rittenhouse said hotel staff worked extra hours calling people who stayed at the resort in the past and ensuring people knew the park was open.

"When a traumatic accident like that happens, some people just automatically assume the businesses in the area have closed or that they aren't open normal hours," Rittenhouse said. "We did everything possible to make sure they did not think that about Kentucky Lake resort."

Newcomb said reservations for the summer months have been slow, but both Rittenhouse and he expect the news of the bridge's completion to rouse up summer vacationers.

"People are going to come," Rittenhouse said. "Fishermen are going to fish no matter what. People are waiting on news and to get the all-clear, so we aren't worried about the summer."

KY. BRIEF

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Eighth-graders in Kentucky are scoring higher than their national counterparts in science in what is known as the Nation's Report Card.

The Kentucky Department of Education reports that for 2011, the state's average score was 157 compared with a national average of 151. The grading scale goes from zero to 300.

The last time the test was taken, in 2009, Kentucky students had an average score of 156, while the national average was 149.

The scores were released Thursday by the U.S. Department of Education.

PROGRAM: USDA creates changes to school meals

Schools, said on average 7,456 Christian County students participate in the National School Lunch Program everyday while 3,923 students use the breakfast program daily.

McIntosh doesn't expect the new standards to affect meals too much next year. She said she is already following many of the new standards, serving mostly whole grains, only low-fat and fat-free milk and making fruits and vegetables available to students.

While the schools only served fruits and vegetables at lunch previously, McIntosh said they will now have to serve them at breakfast as well. In order to meet the daily fruit and vegetable requirement, McIntosh worries that she may have to start giving students plates with fruits and vegetables already on them.

"That is a waste right there because it means you are preparing more plus it is going to go in the trash," McIntosh said. "That is something that comes from the government, and we can't stop it."

McIntosh's office is reimbursed by the USDA for program meals. Meals are sold at three different levels — paid, reduced and free — and McIntosh receives different reimbursements for each level.

According to the USDA, the new standards will cost $3.2 billion to implement. USDA will allocate 6 cents more per meal to help cover the additional costs. Lisa Gross, spokesperson for the Kentucky Department of Education, said KDE hasn't analyzed whether the increase will cover the higher costs.

McIntosh doesn't expect it will. She's accumulated more than $2.1 million in food costs through this school year and expects a 10 to 25 percent increase with the new standards.

As strict as possible?

While some people, such as First Lady Michelle Obama, have championed the new standards, others think they fail to address key foods. Margo Wootan, director of nutrition policy at the Center for Science in the Public Interest, helped formulate the standards and said the USDA originally limited the amount of french fries students could be given to two servings per week.

While pizza can still be served to students, the USDA wanted to stop considering it a vegetable under the new standards, Wootan said. On both changes, she said, Congress forced the USDA to change its course.

"Our hope was that Congress would stay out of it and leave the standards to the experts at USDA," she said. "In this case, Congress was hearing a lot from potato growers, french fry manufacturers, pizza manufacturers. They decided to step in."

Looking at the new standards, some of the changes from previous requirements seem marginal. Schools previously had to serve 1.5 to 2 ounces of meat/meat alternative to students each day. Under the new standards, kindergarten through fifth-grade students will be served 8-10 ounces a week, sixth-through eighth-graders will receive 9-10 ounces weekly and grades nine through 12 will be served 10-12 ounces weekly.

Wootan agreed that the new meat standard doesn't represent much of a change. By changing from a daily to weekly standard though, she said USDA wanted to give schools more flexibility.

Under the new standards, schools can serve meals with high meat content one day and low meat content the next and have both go toward their weekly requirement, she said.

The major changes, Wootan thinks, are in fruit, vegetable and whole grain levels. Schools were only encouraged to serve whole grains previously. Now, at least half of school grains will have to be whole grain rich by July 1. By 2014, schools will have to serve only whole grains.

Schools previously only had to serve half to three-fourths of a cup of fruit or vegetables each day. They will now have to serve three-fourths of a cup to one cup of vegetables and half of a cup to one cup of fruit each day.

There will also be weekly requirements for legumes, dark green and red/orange vegetables. Dr. Janet Mullins, an associate professor in food and nutrition at University of Kentucky, said fruits and vegetables are key to helping children fight obesity and high blood pressure.

"We know that plant-based foods, particularly the colorful ones, can help reduce disease risk," Mullins said. "Today's children need to control their body weight and even reduce risk for diabetes. Eating more vegetables is a step in the right direction."

Nutritional challenges

McIntosh said the lower sodium requirements and calorie levels present a challenge in creating menus. For lunch, schools previously had to serve at least 664 calories to kindergarten through sixth-grade students and 825 calories to seventh- through 12th-grade students. For breakfast, they had to serve at least 554 calories to all students.

Kindergarten through fifth-grade students will now have to be served 550-650 calories, sixth through eighth grade will receive 600-700 and ninth through 12th grade will be served 750-800. For breakfast, kindergarten through fifth grade will be served 350-500 calories, sixth through eighth grade will receive 400-550 and ninth through 12th grade will be served 450-600.

Schools previously had no target goals for sodium. Starting in the 2014-15 school year though, kindergarten through fifth-grade students can be served no more than 1,230 milligrams of sodium for lunch, sixth through eighth grade no more than 1,360 milligrams and ninth through 12th grade no more than 1,420 milligrams.

At breakfast, kindergarten through fifth grade will be served no more than 540 milligrams, sixth through eighth grade no more than 600 milligrams and ninth through 12th grade no more than 640 milligrams. Target levels for sodium will again be lowered for the 2017-18 and 2022-23 school years.

Wootan expects the new sodium levels will require major shifts by schools and food manufacturers.

"Schools can't just change their recipes because they are relying on premade and processed foods," Wootan said. "They need the food manufacturers to reformulate the product in order to bring the numbers down in order for schools to be compliant."

Wootan expects schools will come up with new ways to distribute sodium to comply with the standards. In some cases, she said, a school could focus most of a meal's sodium in an item like a sandwich and serve it with low sodium sides like fruit or carrots.

Mullins said that while lower sodium is important nutritionally, she expects it will place a heavy burden on schools. She thinks lowering sodium content needs to start with food companies.

"As food manufacturers begin to reduce sodium in products available for school food service, it would be feasible to lower the content in meals," Mullins said. "Also, by serving more vegetables and fruits with less meats and grains, the sodium could be reduced."

McIntosh said lowering sodium levels affects how meals taste and makes kids less likely to eat school-provided food. McIntosh receives no money from the school system for her program, funding it completely through lunch fees and reimbursements. With changing the standards, she worries about student participation in the meal programs.

"We are going to have to serve a menu that students will eat," she said.

KENTUCKY BRIEF

Ex-teacher indicted for sexual abuse

FORT THOMAS, Ky. (AP) — A former teacher at a northern Kentucky high school has been indicted on a charge of sexual abuse just days after she resigned from her job.

Andrea Conners resigned from her teaching position at Highlands High School May 3.

The Kentucky Enquirer reports Conners, 33, was indicted Thursday on a count of first-degree sexual abuse. Her attorney, Rob Dziech of Cincinnati, declined to comment on the charge.

Police have released no details about the alleged incident.

Schools Superintendent Gene Kirchner said in a statement Thursday that administrators heard rumors about a high school faculty member having an inappropriate relationship with a student. He said they investigated immediately and "the faculty member in question had resigned in lieu of termination." Conners was not named in the statement.

on a case-by-case basis when each person should leave, Ellis said.

The Salvation Army also closes during the day except during extremely hot or cold weather, Ellis said.

Accordingly, people who stay at The Salvation Army still retain their homeless status. But the veterans center serves a different purpose. Government authorities consider it a stable home for those who finish the entry process, Dixon said.

Pennyroyal Mental Health oversees the facility. It only accepts veterans who suffer from drug or alcohol addiction, mental illness or both.

Soldiers suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder and alcoholism would fall into the last category.

Not all its residents come from Christian County. Temporary homeless shelters throughout western Kentucky, Clarksville, Tenn., and southern Illinois can refer veterans there, as can VA hospitals.

Since it opened, the center has accepted two to four new residents each week — but some have left before long, Dixon said. They didn't want to participate in the mandatory mental treatment.

"That's the nature of the beast," Dixon said. "There are some folks in this particular population that just kind of like the lifestyle, so they stick with it."

Only one veteran from the first five dropped out, and the rest recently completed their "orientation" phase. One will start working at a local factory Monday. The remaining three are seeking jobs, with the help of the facility's staff and the Breathitt Career Center, and all will continue getting treatment.

Dixon imagines most residents will stay 12 to 18 months if they successfully complete each phase of treatment. He wants them to leave with steady jobs, two months' worth of rent payments, money for deposits on utilities and a few months' worth of savings.

They'll continue receiving mental treatment via Pennyroyal Mental Health, he said.

Dixon estimates that 60 percent of the facility's current residents lived on the streets before they arrived and slept at temporary shelters, like The Salvation Army, overnight.

"It doesn't sound like a lot," Dixon said. "But every head that hits a pillow in this facility at night is one that's not sleeping on a park bench, or in a facility where they have to get up at five in the morning and leave, or in a car somewhere."

Post office closings temporarily delayed

FROM THE KENTUCKY PRESS NEWS SERVICE

Communities in fear of losing their local post office can breathe a sigh of relief for now as the U.S. Post Office announces a new strategy to achieve cost savings measures for the agency.

In June of 2011, the USPS announced its intention to survey traffic and customers at rural post offices to determine which locations would be closed in an effort to save money.

Post offices in Mason, Bracken, Lewis and Fleming counties were part of that review and a series of public meetings were held at each post office location targeted for closure.

On Wednesday, the USPS issued a press release announcing a new strategy that could keep the nation's smallest post offices open for business, under a plan to return the agency to financial stability.

According to the USPS press release, the plan would keep the existing post office in place, but with modified retail window hours to match customer use. Access to the retail lobby and to post office boxes would remain unchanged, and the town's zip code and community identity would be retained.

Local post offices affected by the changes are: Augusta, Dover, Elizaville, Foster, Georgetown, Hillsboro, May's Lick, Milford, Minerva, Mount Olivet, Muses Mill, Plummer's Landing, Washington and Quincy. Post office locations in Adams and Brown counties in Ohio are Bentonville, Higginsport, Decatur, Russellville, and Stout.

"Meeting the needs of postal customers is, and will always be, a top priority. We continue to balance that by better aligning service options with customer demand and reducing the cost to serve," said Postmaster General and CEO Patrick R. Donahoe. "With that said, we've listened to our customers in rural America and we've heard them loud and clear - they want to keep their post office open. We believe today's announcement will serve our customers' needs and allow us to achieve real savings to help the Postal Service return to long-term financial stability."

The new strategy would be implemented over a two-year, multi-phased approach and would not be completed until September 2014. Once implementation is completed, the Postal Service estimates savings of a half billion dollars annually.

"The Postal Service is committed to serving America's communities and providing a responsible and fair approach for our employees and customers," said Megan Brennan, Postal Service chief operating officer. "The post offices in rural America will remain open unless a community has a strong preference for one of the other options. We will not close any of these rural Post Offices without having provided a viable solution."

The Postal Service will provide an opportunity for the Postal Regulatory Commission to review this plan prior to making any changes. The Postal Service intends to file a request for an advisory opinion on the plan with the PRC later this month. Community meetings would then be conducted to review options in greater detail. Communities will be notified by mail of the date, time and location of these meetings.

This new option complements existing alternatives, which include:

- 1) Providing mail delivery service to residents and businesses in the affected community by either rural carrier or highway contract route;
- 2) Contracting with a local business to create a Village Post Office; and
- 3) Offering service from a nearby Post Office.

A voluntary early retirement incentive for the nation's more than 21,000 non-executive postmasters was also announced.

Survey research conducted by the respected Opinion Research Corporation in February, showed 54 percent of rural customers would prefer the new solution to maintain a local post office. Forty-six percent prefer one of the previously announced solutions (20 percent prefer village post office, 15 percent prefer providing services at a nearby Post Office, 11 percent prefer expanded rural delivery). This strategy would enable a town to possibly have a post office with modified hours, as well as a village post office.

The Postal Service has implemented a voluntary moratorium on all postal facility closings through May 15, 2012. No closings or changes to post office operations will occur until after that time.

In addition to maintaining a retail network of more than 31,000 post offices, the Postal Service also provides online access to postal products and services through usps.com and more than 70,000 alternate access locations.

Kemp: Budget reflects growing economy

BY CARLA JIMENEZ
NEW ERA STAFF WRITER

Mayor Dan Kemp unveiled his proposed budget for the 2012-2013 fiscal year at Thursday's Community Conversations meeting.

Overall, the projected expenses for the proposed budget increased from last year to more than $29 million. During Kemp's presentation, he emphasized three things: the budget reflected the city's priorities, the city is growing and the budget contains no tax rate changes.

Kemp's proposed budget for the 2012-13 fiscal year contains several noteworthy increases from the year before. The budget includes cost of living raises for city employees of 1.5 percent, in contrast to state employees who haven't received any raises for three years. The budget also includes an increase for the fire department, the grounds maintenance department and the information technology departments to allow for the hiring of additional personnel. Kemp specifically recommended hiring six new firefighters/EMTs to lighten the load for an overworked emergency-response team.

After the Yellow Ambulance Company went out of business in August 2010, the Hopkinsville Fire Department and emergency service stepped in to fill the gap and provided needed ambulance service throughout Christian County. But with the added workload, the current staff has been putting in long hours and has racked up a great deal of overtime. Kemp proposed an increase of $351,578 to hire new firefighters and EMTs. The money, however, will be entirely reimbursed to the city by the ambulance board.

"I think everyone agrees that these new employees are needed," Kemp said, "and it will be paid for out of the money that the ambulance board earns for the service that's been provided to the county."

The fire department and the police department are the largest expenses in the proposed budget, and take up 24 percent each. Kemp said that the budget reflects the city's commitment to public safety.

The increase in expenses from the previous year, Kemp said, also shows the growing strength of the city's economy. As the city grows, the budget grows.

Incumbent has plans for Hopkinsville

BY CARLA JIMENEZ
NEW ERA STAFF WRITER

Peggy Rogers-Everett has enjoyed her time on the Hopkinsville City Council — but she's not finished.

"I don't feel like I've been on council long enough to accomplish the things I want to accomplish," she said.

One of the things Rogers-Everett said she wants to do is improve the infrastructure in Hopkinsville, and she wants to see the city grow. She also said she wants everybody to feel welcome here.

She said a lot of her plans are on the back burner, and she hopes she gets the opportunity to see them through. One of the things she's really looking forward to is the construction of the new municipal building.

Rogers-Everett said the new municipal center will bring a lot of business to Hopkinsville. The Lackey Municipal Building, which is currently being used by the city, will be renovated for Hopkinsville Police Department. The old Planters Bank site will be transformed into a new municipal center for the city.

Rogers-Everett said the project will create jobs for local residents. She added the new municipal building will be built using local materials, putting money back into the city's economy.

"I think that it's a good idea, and I believe when other people see the city growing and improving, then that will be an incentive to them to open up shop," she said.

Rogers-Everett also has some other plans in the works, but she's keeping her lips sealed about them.

"We're actually working right now on bringing more business to Hopkinsville," she said. "I can't say right now. But it does look like we will be growing."

Should her constituents choose to re-elect her, Rogers-Everett said she has many more plans for her second term. She said she will attend every city committee and board meeting, not just the ones she is assigned to. She said attending all of those meetings will give her a better picture of what is going on in the city.

Murder verdict gets range of responses

KENTUCKY PRESS NEWS SERVICE

Nearly five years after the violent shooting deaths of Tracy Burke and Karen Comer at a Rineyville home, the victims' families, police and others attached to the long-running case held a private memorial service Tuesday outside a hotel near Fort Campbell hours after a military jury found Brent Burke guilty of the crimes.

Burke, estranged husband of Tracy Burke, was sentenced to life without possibility of parole, bringing closure to those who have struggled through five trials — two mistrials, two hung juries and a court-martial. Burke was convicted of premeditated murder, felony murder, burglary, child endangerment and obstruction of justice.

Local prosecutors attempted to try the ex-soldier four times in the shooting deaths but, against the families' wishes, the charges were dismissed without prejudice last June.

"Justice is finally done," said Carey Aldridge, the family's private attorney based in Elizabethtown.

The fundamental difference, Aldridge said, was the dedication of the military prosecution team, who "interviewed and meticulously prepared witnesses." Another key difference was Burke's interview with police, which was admitted as evidence in its entirety for the first time.

Phone calls made Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon to outgoing Commonwealth's Attorney Chris Shaw were not returned.

During the memorial service Tuesday night, the family lit paper lanterns for their loved ones, Aldridge said. State police Sgt. Matt Johnson, one of two KSP detectives who worked the case, estimated about 50 people were in attendance.

Johnson and Detective Larry Walker worked the case together from the Sept. 11, 2007, shooting. Both testified in the civilian trials in Hardin County as well as the Fort Campbell court-martial.

"This has never been about the state police," Johnson said Tuesday night. "This is about the Burke children, the Comer family and the Wilburn family."

Even though 50 were there to remember the lives of Tracy Burke and Karen Comer, at least one loved one was missing, Aldridge said. Tracy's mother, Patricia Wilburn, died earlier this year.

In a 2011 phone interview, Wilburn said, "Mom will not stop. I'm dying of emphysema, and I will fight to see him in jail before I die. If I die before then, I will come back and haunt Brent Burke."

Before her death, Wilburn had a plaque made for Walker to thank him for his dedication to the case, Aldridge said. As Tracy Burke's sons presented it to the detective Tuesday night, their grandmother was with the families in spirit, Aldridge said.

HCC enrollment at record level

BY BENJAMIN JOUBERT
NEW ERA STAFF WRITER

Enrollment at Hopkinsville Community College last school year was the highest ever. Most of the increase is because of a jump in enrollment at HCC's Fort Campbell campus, said HCC President Jim Selbe during Thursday's board meeting.

HCC's Hopkinsville campus was down 1.7 percent in enrollment during the spring. Even so, the total number of students enrolled at HCC was 3,927, "shattering" the previous spring's record of 3,658, Selbe said.

Concurrently, the Fort Campbell campus saw more than a 22 percent increase in enrollment last year.

It is possible that in the near future, for the first time in HCC history, there could be more students enrolled at the Fort Campbell campus than in Hopkinsville, Selbe said.

However, Selbe doesn't expect the enrollment numbers to stay the same in the upcoming years. One of the reasons the numbers are so high is because there is no other community college in Clarksville, Tenn., Selbe said.

In the near future, Nashville State Community College will be installing a Clarksville campus. That might take some of the enrollment numbers at Fort Campbell away from HCC, Selbe said. Additionally, the recovering economy could affect enrollment as people look for jobs instead of attending college, Selbe said.

Currently, because of the enrollment numbers, revenue at HCC is "very, very good," Selbe said.

Since the summer of 2011 to the spring of 2012, HCC's income was $870,000 beyond the estimated budget of $9.3 million.

"That's really great news because we are going to need every dime of that," Selbe said. "That's a good number for us."

Selbe also presented the board with what he called "the most difficult, confusing budget ever." With nine budget cuts in the last eight years, balancing HCC's funds has become a chore, Selbe said.

The main increase in the budget will come from a Kentucky Community and Technical College System initiated tuition increase of $5 for every credit hour, Selbe said. KCTCS asked schools to draft the 2012-13 school year's budget based on enrollment from the past three years. The problem, Selbe said, is enrollment may not be as high as it is in the upcoming year for HCC.

Local man accused of kicking firefighter

FROM NEW ERA STAFF REPORTS

Police arrested an 18-year-old Hopkinsville man after he allegedly punched a firefighter, according to a Hopkinsville police report.

Around 9 p.m. Wednesday, an ambulance crew was called to an East Seventh Street address for a man who was supposedly lying on the floor of his home having a seizure, according to the report.

When they arrived, Kristopher M. Wyvell allegedly smelled of alcohol, had bloodshot eyes and was disoriented. His vital signs were good, but he was not talking.

Firefighters attempted to put Wyvell onto a stretcher and he began kicking and punching, saying that he wanted to go to jail, and that he would fight police also. One of the firefighters was kicked by Wyvell, police said.

He was charged with third-degree assault and public intoxication.

City will strip and repave streets

The Hopkinsville Public Works Department announced Thursday that it will be removing asphalt and repaving the following streets: West 11th Street between Main Street to Bethel Street, Gant Street, Cates Street, Hope Street, Springmont Court and Ginnie Lane.

The repaving began Thursday, and will last about two weeks. Officials with the city request that people do not park their cars on these streets during the repaving process.

HCC Foundation recognizes scholarship recipients

The Hopkinsville Community College Foundation recognized donors and honored scholarship recipients for the 2011-12 academic year Thursday at the group's inaugural award luncheon.

HCC alumnus Danny Anderson was the featured speaker. He graduated from HCC in 2008 and shared his story about growing up in Detroit's inner city, serving six years in the military and becoming the first man in his family to graduate from college. He is now an emergency room nurse at Gateway Medical Center in Clarksville, Tenn.

The scholarship recipients honored at the luncheon were (Cadiz) T'ana Dixon and Jayse P'Pool; (Crofton) Kim Davenport; (Elkton) Cynthia Fithian and Karen Hill; (Fort Campbell) Jasmine

Half of young adults get sunburned

ATLANTA (AP) — Half of U.S. adults under 30 say they have had a sunburn at least once in the past year, a government survey found — a sign young people aren't heeding the warnings about skin cancer.

The rate of sunburn is about the same as it was 10 years earlier, reversing progress reported just five years ago.

"I don't know that we're making any headway," said Dr. Len Lichtenfeld, the American Cancer Society's deputy chief medical officer.

Experts say that even one blistering burn can double the risk of developing melanoma, an often lethal form of skin cancer.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention released the study Thursday, which was based on a 2010 survey of about 5,000 U.S. adults ages 18 to 29. The study showed that the share of those who said they had had a sunburn in the preceding year went from about 51 percent in 2000 to 45 percent in 2005, but then went back up to 50 percent in 2010.

Researchers don't know for sure why the sunburn rate picked up again, said Dr. Marcus Plescia, director of the CDC's Division of Cancer Prevention and Control.

Surprisingly, the CDC also found an increase since 2005 in how many people said they wear sunscreen or take other steps to protect their skin. But only about a third said they usually wore sunscreen. And the increasing rate of sunburns suggests many people are not putting on enough or re-applying it sufficiently, some experts said.

Also on Thursday, the CDC released findings from the survey on how many people use tanning beds, booths or sun lamps, and Lichtenfeld said of the results: "I am astounded."

About 6 percent of all adults said they had done indoor tanning in the previous year. The rates were much, much higher in young white women: About 32 percent of white women ages 18 to 21 had done indoor tanning, and nearly as many white women 22 to 25 did.

A similar survey in 2005 found about 27 percent of young women said they had done indoor tanning.

The latest study found indoor tanning often involved more than one trip to a salon for the novelty of it, or to bronze for a special occasion. Women in their 20s said they did indoor tanning more than 20 times in the previous year, on average.

Another surprise: As many as 13 percent of women who had a family history of skin cancer had done indoor tanning.

Experts said there is no longer significant scientific debate that indoor tanning causes cancer. In 2009, tanning devices were classified as carcinogenic by the World Health Organization. That was based on an analysis of 20 studies that found the risk of melanoma rose 75 percent in people who started indoor tanning before age 30.

MURDER: Burke verdict gets range of response

Aldridge said Burke left at 6 a.m. Wednesday to begin his sentence at the U.S. Disciplinary Barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kan. There is a military appeals process, she said.

After years of struggling for a conclusion in the court system, Aldridge said she could not put into words how the Comer and Wilburn families felt.

"Yes, there's been a conclusion, but it certainly isn't the end of the road," she said.

There is an adoption case pending regarding the Burkes' children as well as two civil suits, one of which is a wrongful death suit in Hardin Circuit Court. The conviction potentially could make it easier to reach a favorable outcome in the civil suits, she said.

The most positive outcome, she said, is that the children are protected.

Johnson said because of the severity of the case and media attention, the Burke case has been one of KSP Post 4's larger ones.

Though the road to a conclusion was a long one, he said, they ultimately were able to navigate the obstacles and obtain some closure for the victims' families.

"We're going to do whatever it takes to get justice for the family," Johnson said.

The budget prediction from KCTCS could be around $500,000 too high, Selbe said. As a result, with the approval of KCTCS, HCC placed $256,000 from the estimated budget into areas where it won't be used. That way, if HCC is below the estimated budget, it won't affect school funding, Selbe said.

"If we are wrong, not a problem," Selbe said. "We will have some money to spend next year."

has fired one staff and one faculty member and rearranged another's contract in order to balance the next year's budget, Selbe said. The college also took money from savings to pay off an 11-year loan, freeing a $69,000 annual payment. The estimated budget for the 2012-13 school year is $16.9 million, $600,000 more than last year.

The board approved the submission of the budget to KCTCS.

EVERETT: Incumbent has plans for Hopkinsville

Rogers-Everett also wants to improve the quality of life for everyone in Hopkinsville, especially the youth. One of her goals is to come up with inexpensive ideas to keep children entertained and out of trouble. Finding ways to keep Hopkinsville's youth busy will also offer incentives for young people to come back after they have gone to college, she said.

"I think that we need to volunteer our time and help our youth because they are our future," she said.

Rogers-Everett recognizes that the three-way race for the Ward 7 seat is a close one, partly because voter turnout for the May 22 primary is expected to be low. She also recognizes the difficulty of running against one of her friends, Richard Covington, a veteran of city council.

"I know Richard has a lot more experience than me, but I feel like he had his time," she said.

While she doesn't have as much experience as Covington, she said she has more experience than her other opponent, Buddy Oglesby.

"I'm not sure he knows what he's getting into," Rogers-Everett said. "You have to have thick skin, and not take things personally because you can't please everybody."

The winner of the Ward 7 Democratic primary will run unopposed in the November general election as no Republicans have filed to run for the seat.

Recruiting physicians resembles civic lesson

To understand why Christian County has fewer primary care doctors than other areas of Kentucky, consider this from Teresa Bowers, who oversees physician recruitment for Jennie Stuart Medical Center: “Little old Hopkinsville is up against Boston and Chicago and all of these bigger cities,” Bowers said recently in a New Era story. “They’re not throwing darts at a map and saying, ‘I’m going to Hopkinsville.’”

The Kentucky Board of Medical Licensure estimates there is one primary care doctor for every 2,000 people in Christian County. Bowers thinks the ratio is actually about one primary care doctor to every 4,000. The state average for a county is one doctor per 1,000 residents.

That puts things in focus, and we have to appreciate Bowers’ assessment of what we face in the competition to attract physicians.

It also reminds us that Christian County has faced other challenges in competing for talent and resources.

In the early 1980s, around the time Hopkinsville retailer Herb Hays was elected mayor, local leaders rallied around the idea that this community could compete with other cities across the nation for industrial plants. The Hopkinsville-Christian County Economic Development Council was incorporated in 1986. Within a few years, the EDC and its recruitment became a source of community pride for many people. As one industrial park, and then a second, attracted new tenants and thousands of manufacturing jobs, Hopkinsville gained a reputation with state officials as one of Kentucky’s top recruiters. And despite some detractors, the EDC remains a significant institution in Christian County.

What can we learn from the industrial recruitment model that might apply to the recruitment of physicians?

We can recognize that we have to compete like we mean to win. It helps that Jennie Stuart Medical Center has someone like Bowers, a veteran in local health care administration, devoted to the recruitment. Bowers knows this community and its health care systems.

But it’s becoming increasingly clear that health care is everyone’s business. We cannot separate the health of the community from our economy and quality of life.

In the way that Herb Hays and others made industrial recruitment and economic development a source of community pride, we need a broad civic approach to our health care systems. That includes the recruitment of health care professionals.

Balanced Senate proposal best postal reform option

Now that the U.S. Senate has passed bipartisan S. 1789 to reform the ailing U.S. Postal Service, critics are trying to disable the bill on its way to the House. Both postal unions and USPS want more for their side, and some Republicans mistakenly believe the bill burdens taxpayers.

Unfortunately, Kentucky Sens. Mitch McConnell and Rand Paul both bought into that logic and opposed 1789.

Rep. Darrell Issa, R-CA, whose House bill awaits action, blasted “special interests.” But Business Week says, “Considering how many people are unhappy with the bill, it isn’t clear which special interests Issa is referring to.”

S. 1789 provides tools to help ensure the survival of the Postal Service, the circulatory system for a $1.1 trillion mailing industry — making sure cash, greeting cards, packages, newspapers and magazines arrive on time.

Consider some of the alternative fixes.

Issa’s bill would immediately end Saturday mail, close half the mail processing centers — including all but Louisville in Kentucky — and thousands of post offices, and put a new board of political appointees in charge to trim workers’ benefits and wages. It would direct USPS to favor profit over service, which will frighten away business mail.

At the other extreme are Sen. Bernie Sanders, I-Vt., who wanted to keep everything open, the labor unions who say the USPS will heal as the economy heals, and The White House solution: raise rates.

For Sens. Susan Collins, R-Maine, Joe Lieberman, I-Conn., and co-sponsors Tom Carper, D-Del., and Scott Brown, R-Mass., the extremes do little to ensure the USPS’ long-term survival.

S. 1789 encourages a more flexible, less costly workforce. It would keep mail flowing while cutting costs. It would allow plant closures if the USPS maintains local mail delivery speed.

S. 1789 provides a different vision. Consider:

■ The USPS’ plant-closing plan would amass mail at automated urban centers, where costly machines sit idle much of the day. To optimize machine usage, the USPS would haul mail much farther. But the haul would slow the mailstream, particularly in rural areas far from metro plants. It would make rural Kentuckians second-class citizens who would get and send mail more slowly than urban dwellers and hamper smaller communities’ quests for economic development.

■ Many say they wouldn’t miss Saturday mail. Who would be hurt by a five-day delivery scheme? Anyone who depends on timely mail delivery. Shutting down the system two days a week — three on Monday holidays — would slow deliveries for those who need prescriptions delivered; citizens who get newspapers by mail; and businesses needing six-day cash flows.

■ Closing small post offices seems a no-brainer. But USPS could have circuit-rider postmasters to open offices a few hours a day, maintaining communities’ links to the world.

■ The Congressional Budget Office says 1789 would cost $33.6 billion. But postage-payers, not taxpayers, carry this burden. Taxpayers face liability as the funder-of-last-resort only if postal revenues dry up — which is more likely to happen if mail slows to a crawl.

Finally, members of Congress differ on how they see USPS. Is it a corporation or a government agency responsible for binding the nation together?

Fact: it is a Government-Sponsored Enterprise, more like Fannie Mae than IBM or the Defense Department. It has to use business tools, but carry out a public mission.

The USPS has enormous power in the marketplace. Members of Congress who mistakenly see postal reform as an exercise in deregulation may actually unleash a powerful federal agency while those who look to raise postage so generous worker benefits can continue could derail the engine that keeps jobs alive.

What’s needed is a clear-eyed vision and a full understanding of the needs of all the USPS serves. Postal management today has an impossible task, expected to accomplish business goals without the cost-controls businesses have, expected to achieve government ends without federal support.

Congress owns this confusion. Only Congress can fix it. Neither “deregulation,” rate hikes, nor abrupt and disruptive approaches to labor costs will get the USPS to stability.

S. 1789, on the other hand, provides crucial steps toward resolving issues the USPS faces.

Conservatives, like liberals, tend to cliches

Like many of us who pontificate for a living, my column-writing colleague Jonah Goldberg apparently toils away in daily frustration that so many people fail to take his political advice.

That would explain his new book, which takes on one of the world’s least-threatening problems, the political cliches that many people utter as a substitute for original thoughts.

It is titled, “The Tyranny of Cliches: How Liberals Cheat in the War of Ideas.” With a title like that, need I bother to mention that the author is a conservative?

As such, he focuses on the cliches that trouble him most, which happen to be those that he has heard uttered by liberals. That’s sort of like reading Playboy for the articles; it’s interesting, but something important is missing.

I do agree that some cliches like “violence never settles anything” need to go, at least until we find a good substitute for the word “never.”

In fact, history offers many examples of violence settling things, although not always in ways that were expected by its initiators. Vietnam, Iraq and the secession of the Confederacy come immediately to mind.

But the more of Goldberg’s book that I read, the more appreciation I feel for the pithy power of the bumper-sticker truisms that he ridicules.

I like, for example, the old chestnut, “Better ten guilty men go free than one innocent man suffer.” Goldberg responds, “So you won’t mind if those ten guilty men move next door to you?” Sure, but why blame the innocent guy for the ten guilty guys next door?

I would blame our criminal justice system for its failure to do what taxpayers pay them to do: protect not only our lives and property but also our constitutional rights.

This barroom argument would not annoy me as much if there were not 289 exonerations of convicted individuals thanks to DNA evidence since 1989, according to the Innocence Project. The DNA era confirms some of our worst fears: We’re getting the worst of both worlds. Innocents are suffering while guilty go free. And Goldberg jokes about it.

Whoopie. And the author doesn’t like “Diversity is strength,” either. (“Cool,” he writes. “The NBA should have a quota for midgets and one-legged point guards!”)

Yet, without getting into the deep weeds of affirmative action debates, this country has prospered as a result of its mulligan stew of ethnics — its Pages and Goldbergs, etc., etc. — and our ability, more often than not, to work together with a sense of common purpose despite our differences.

And, surely, Goldberg is not serious in his pot shots at this old gem: “One man’s terrorist is another man’s freedom fighter.” Sure, he writes, “if the other man is an idiot.” But, so what? An idiot can kill you just as dead as a sane man can. And even the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. was viewed as a terrorist by those whose segregated way of life he set out to upset.

In fact, I would argue that one person’s cliché is another person’s wisdom.

To illustrate and offer a bit of balance to what Goldberg has initiated, here are a few of the most annoying cliches, in my view, that I often hear from the political right:

“We don’t solve problems by throwing money at them.” Sure. But you don’t solve many problems by sucking money out of them, either.

“Poor people need to pull themselves up by their own bootstraps.” Easier said than done, my friend. I tried to pull myself up by my own bootstraps and almost tumbled over on my head.

“Keep the government’s hands off of my Medicare.” Not easy. You’ll have better luck with your bootstraps.

“Liberals love free speech as long as it supports the left.” Unlike conservatives, who love free speech as long as it is does not come from the Quran or the Dixie Chicks?

“America: Love It Or Leave It.” Funny, but, I haven’t heard that one much since President Barack Obama’s election. Can we bring it back?

“Why are all the news media slanted to the left — except Fox News?” Maybe Stephen Colbert got it right. He said, “Reality has a liberal bias.”

That was a joke. It’s not a cliché yet. But give it time.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, May 11, the 132nd day of 2012. There are 234 days left in the year.

On this date:
In 1647, Peter Stuyvesant arrived in New Amsterdam to become governor of New Netherland.

In 1927, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences was founded during a banquet at the Biltmore Hotel in Los Angeles.

In 1937, “SPAM” was registered as a trademark by Hormel Foods, producer of the canned meat product.

In 1973, charges against Daniel Ellsberg for his role in the “Pentagon Papers” case were dismissed by Judge William M. Byrne, who cited government misconduct.

In 1981, legendary reggae artist Bob Marley died in a Miami hospital at age 36. The Andrew Lloyd Webber musical “Cats” opened in London.

In 1987, doctors in Baltimore transplanted the heart and lungs of an auto accident victim to a patient who gave up his own heart to another recipient. (Clinton House, the nation’s first living heart donor, died 14 months later.)

In 1996, an Atlanta-bound ValuJet DC-9 caught fire shortly after takeoff from Miami and crashed into the Florida Everglades, killing all 110 people on board.

Ten years ago: Israel pulled out of the West Bank town of Tulkarem (tuhl-KA’-rum), leaving Palestinian-run territories free of Israeli troops for the first time in six weeks. Joseph Bonanno, the notorious gangster known as “Joe Bananas,” died in Tucson, Ariz., at age 97.

Five years ago: Speaking aboard the aircraft carrier USS John C. Stennis in the Persian Gulf, Vice President Dick Cheney warned Iran the U.S. and its allies would keep it from restricting sea traffic as well as from developing nuclear weapons. North and South Korea adopted a military agreement, enabling the first train crossing of their border in more than half a century.

One year ago: Former hedge fund titan Raj Rajaratnam was convicted by a federal jury in New York in an insider-trading case of five counts of conspiracy and nine of securities fraud. (Rajaratnam was sentenced to 11 years in prison.) Two earthquakes struck southern Spain in quick succession, killing at least nine people, injuring dozens and causing major damage to buildings.

Satan will do all he can to pull us away from God

DEAR REV. GRAHAM: I don't come from a religious family, so a lot of the "churchy" talk I hear people use in the church I'm attending goes over my head. For example, what do they mean when they talk about someone "backsliding"? I gather this isn't a good thing, but I'm too embarrassed to ask. — Mrs. D.V.

DEAR MRS. D.V.: Don't be embarrassed about asking people to explain things you don't understand. If they love Jesus, they'll want to help you — and it also may encourage them to communicate their faith more clearly! Jesus spoke simply and directly, and the Bible says "the common people heard him gladly" (Mark 12:37, KJV).

The word "backsliding" simply means to turn from the way we once lived by drifting away from God and allowing sin to rule us. When we come by faith to Christ and commit our lives to Him, He forgives us all our sins and comes to live within us by His Holy Spirit. He adopts us as His children — and nothing can ever change that. As the Bible says, nothing "will be able to separate us from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Romans 8:39).

But our old sinful nature still lives within us, and Satan will do all he can to pull us away from God. Sometimes we give in, and when we allow it to continue we have backslidden. Jeremiah said of the people of his day, "Our sins testify against us ... Our backsliding is great" (Jeremiah 14:7). Yet God will forgive us if we repent and turn back to Him.

Make sure of your commitment to Jesus Christ. Then ask Him to help you resist temptation and stay close to Him. God delights in you — and the best way to avoid backsliding is to delight in Him every day.

NATION BRIEF

Military class suspended for its view on Islam

WASHINGTON (AP) — A course for U.S. military officers was teaching that America is at war with Muslims, suggesting the U.S. ultimately may have to wipe out Islamic holy cities like Mecca and Medina just as it destroyed Hiroshima in World War II. That teaching is counter to repeated assertions by U.S. officials over the last decade that the U.S. is at war against terrorists who distort Islam — not against the religion itself.

The Defense Department suspended the course at the Joint Forces Staff College last month due to the inflammatory materials, but details of what was taught were first revealed Thursday.

Gen. Martin Dempsey, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, called the material objectionable, irresponsible and against American values on freedom of religion.

REGION 2 TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Region champions

Hopkinsville High School's Mallory Perkins (above) and Caldwell County's Clint Joiner (below) return shots during their matches in the Region 2 tennis tournament Thursday at Ruff Park. Perkins won the girls' Region 2 singles championship, while Joiner captured the boys' Region 2 crown.

Hoptown's Perkins takes 2nd straight Region 2 singles title

BY JOE WILSON
NEW ERA SPORTS EDITOR

Hopkinsville High School senior Mallory Perkins could hardly contain her emotion after defeating Caldwell County's Kate Phelps 6-2, 6-2 for the girls' Region 2 singles tennis championship Thursday night.

And why not? It's the fourth straight region championship and second straight singles crown for Perkins, who also has won two doubles titles in her career.

"This feels so good, I just can't believe it," the top-seeded Perkins said after the win at the Ruff Park tennis courts. "You want to go out on top at the end."

Perkins advanced to the finals with a 6-2, 6-2 victory over Caldwell's Erin Harper in the semifinals earlier in the day.

In the final, Phelps, the No. 2 seed, opened the first set by winning the first game before Perkins settled in.

"I'm a little frustrated because my shoulder isn't letting me do what I think I can do," said Perkins, who missed part of the season with a rotator cuff injury. "In the final, I wasn't as consistent as I wanted to be. Then I started mixing it up and changing the pace and she didn't really like that."

Perkins' victory meant Caldwell and Henderson were tied for the team lead with 11 points. The two teams had to have a playoff late Thursday night with the match not finished by press time.

Henderson dominated the doubles portion of the tournament with the Lady Colonels' Williams and Nunez defeating teammates Stuen and Newland in the finals.

Meanwhile, Hopkinsville's Grey Campbell and Caldwell County's Clint Joiner played a rematch of last year's boys' singles region final.

The two players faced off in a three-set thriller that lasted more than two hours.

In the end, Joiner, the No. 2 seed, held off last year's region champion 3-6, 6-2, 6-4. Campbell defeated Joiner for the 2011 region title.

Joiner's victory meant

Castile, Joiner earn softball accolades

FROM NEW ERA STAFF REPORTS

Two former Christian County High School softball players have been honored for their performances at their respective colleges.

Murray State freshman outfielder Casey Castile was named the 2012 Ohio Valley Conference Softball Freshman of the Year after her first season with the Racers.

Castile hit .351 with 40 runs, 11 home runs and 44 RBIs. She also had a .629 slugging percentage and stole 21 bases during her freshman season.

In addition, Castile was named to the OVC All-Newcomer team and First-Team All-OVC.

Castile also was named the Murray State Female Newcomer of the Year for all sports.

Meanwhile, Griffin Joiner has earned Southeastern Conference honors.

The University of Kentucky freshman catcher has been named All-Freshman SEC after hitting .263 this season. She also led the SEC by catching 12 baserunners stealing.

Joiner is the 2011 Kentucky Miss Softball and is one of three Kentucky players earning All-SEC honors.

Brittany Cervantes made First-Team All-SEC and Kara Dill was on the Second-Team.

The SEC awards were announced late Wednesday.

It has been a good year for former Christian County players. As was previously reported, Stacey Harbold, a sophomore at Brescia University, was named All-Kentucky Intercollegiate Athletic Conference in 2012.

Hopkinsville captures win on senior night

FROM NEW ERA STAFF REPORTS

Hutton White recorded eight strikeouts and allowed only three hits to lead host Hopkinsville to a 4-1 baseball win over Crittenden County on senior night Thursday at Tiger Stadium.

The senior hurler teamed with fellow senior Clayton Smithson, who allowed no runs, no hits and struck out one in an inning of relief, to lead the Tigers (14-12) out of a three-game losing streak.

Senior Matt Stephenson had a single and a triple to lead Hopkinsville at the plate. Senior Gant Unfried added a single and a double and Smithson chipped in with a triple. Rashad Lewis and Taylor Saltsman each added two singles in the victory.

The Tigers will face Crittenden (10-17) again on Saturday in Marion. First pitch is scheduled for 1 p.m.

Christian Co. fails to figure out Region 2 favorite Henderson

Visiting Christian County gave up four runs in the fifth inning and fell to Region 2 favorite Henderson County 7-2 Friday night.

Logan Patterson and Bryan Chilton each had two base hits for the Colonels (16-18), who saw their five-game winning streak come to an end.

Sophomore hurler Dylan Barnett suffered the loss on the mound. Christian County is off until Monday when they will take on host Calloway County.

Cryptoquote

AXYDLBAAXR
is LONGFELLOW

One letter stands for another. In this sample, A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Notice To
Our Advertisers

Counterfeit or fake checks are being used in a growing number of fraudulent schemes. Check overpayment scams target consumers selling cars or other valuable items through classified ads or online auction sites. Unsuspecting sellers get stuck when scammers pass off bogus cashiers checks, corporate checks, or personal checks. If youre selling something, dont accept a check for more than the selling price, no matter how tempting the offer or how convincing the story, especially if it is from an out of town buyer. Ask the buyer to write the check for the correct amount. If the buyer refuses to send the correct amount, return the check. Dont send the merchandise. If you think youve been targeted by a counterfeit check scam, report it to the Federal Trade Commission. Visit www.ftc.gov or call 1-877- FTC-HELP (1-877-382- 4357) for more details or to report suspected fraud. This is a public service announcement brought to you by this newspaper.
